ORDER

Prior to the preparation of the Contractor's offer, it is requested that the Client describes the scope of the project as well as the project requirements in writing. In the event that the description of the project scope and requirements are not provided by the Client, then only tasks included in the Contractor's offer are binding.

An order is deemed submitted once the Client confirms the offer describing the Contractor's services, which will be performed for the Client. A submitted order is a legally binding obligation and represents a contract between the Client and the Contractor.

A contract comes into effect only when the Contractor and the Client have agreed on the price for the service that the Contractor provides to the Client. Insofar there is doubt as to whether the agreed price also covers a particular service that is not explicitly included in the price, the Contractor is not bound to provide such a service until a price has been determined in accordance with these general terms and conditions. Nevertheless, the Contractor is entitled to provide such a service and charge the Client a reasonable price. A reasonable price is a price provided in the tariff conditions of the Association of Architects of Slovenia or other architecture organizations.

After a contract comes into effect, the project task can be changed only if the Client submits a new project task that takes into account the proposed changes and is in accordance with these general terms and conditions.

The Client may withdraw from the contract for violation of the contractual obligation of the Contractor only if the Client has previously notified the Contractor in writing of the violation of Contractor's obligation and gave the Contractor a reasonable period of time for the violation to be remedied. If there is no other agreement, such an appropriate period shall be deemed to be fifteen days, and in the case of larger orders, at least thirty days.

In case of withdrawal from the contract either by the Client or by the Contractor, the Contractor is entitled to receive payment for the entirety of work they performed, and such payment is proportional to the extent to which the order has already been fulfilled. In the case of an order that is carried out in phases, the proportional payment must cover for the already completed phases and for a part of the payment of the last initiated and unfinished stage corresponding to the extent of its fulfilment. In case that we do not receive payment, we deprive the client of all rights related to the project and freely dispose of it. Customer loses all copyrights.

The Client is committed to enable the Contractor to begin the performance of works within a reasonable period of time, to review the work of the Contractor, to certify the undisputed part of the works performed and to pay for such work before the agreed deadline.

ADDITIONAL WORK

A submitted order does not include additional works. Additional works are defined as all orders or changes made and added to the initial order after it has been submitted. In the case of additional works, the Contractor shall prepare the offer and communicate it to the Client for confirmation. Additional works become part of the contractual obligations of the Contractor only if the order for additional work is made in accordance with these general terms and conditions. The contractor is not obliged to start additional work before a contractual agreement has been made. The basis for determining the value of additional works is represented by the value of comparable works, as evidenced in the original contract, unless the nature and extent of additional works do not justify a higher value.

MANIPULATION COSTS

Manipulative costs (transport, printing, postage, etc.) are included in all offers up to a certain amount; in case these costs exceed the estimated costs proposed in the offer, these additional costs are charged at their actual values.

COORDINATION

The price agreed for the contractor's services do not include the service of coordinating third persons, whose involvement might be necessary to develop a project or fulfil certain services. For such coordination services, the Contractor may charge the Client a reasonable price of ten per cent net of the net price charged by these third persons for their services. The Contractor is entitled to get access to the product they design or to other materials affecting the project itself, either by himself or through an authorized person, without limits and prior announcement of access to the site.

COPYRIGHT WORK

If during the process of fulfilling the order a copyrighted work is created, it is the Contractor who is the holder of all material and moral copyright rights to the work. Moral copyrights shall be retained by the Contractor or authors who, in cooperation with the Contractor, created this copyrighted work. The Contractor must be referred to as the author in accordance with the practice in the field and the legislation. Material copyrights can only be transferred to the Client after all obligations of the Client to the Contractor have been settled. Further transfer of the copyright by the Client or any other eligible acquirer is not permitted. The author is the only one who has the right to change the copyrighted work.

DEADLINES

Unless agreed otherwise, the time limit is not an essential element of the contract. If the Contractor's service deadlines are not explicitly specified by a contract, deadlines are defined only by the estimated deadlines as specified in the offer and are thus not legally binding. In the event of a contractual determination of legally binding deadlines, the Client may determine them for the Contractor in accordance with the scope of the project, the Contractor's capabilities, and a reasonable necessary time for the implementation of the project.

The initial deadline may be extended if the Contractor and the Client cannot reach an agreement on additional works on a modified or new project order. Deadlines may also be extended if the Contractor does not receive the necessary advance from the Client, the Client does not provide the Contractor with the necessary insurance for payments, or the Client is illiquid or insolvent by completing his due financial or other liabilities to the Contractor in connection with any order of this Client.

FINAL PROJECT

The Client receives all project elements in printed and digital form in files of the appropriate format, which does not allow for changes to the copyrighted work unless otherwise specified.

PAYMENTS

When issued an invoice by the Contractor, the Client must review the invoice and communicate any

The account will become final after 8 days and must be paid at the time of its maturity. The Contractor may require the Client to pay an appropriate advance to cover material costs, which include the costs of taxes to be paid before the payment due for the contract or his respective part, the estimated travel expenses, the costs of the necessary software, costs of subcontractors and other employees and other similar costs. In the event that the Client suspends or unreasonably defers the project (for longer than 3 months), the Contractor has the right to charge the Client for the works done in proportion to the completion of the project. The payment period for all issued invoices is 15 days unless otherwise specified.

Unless explicitly agreed otherwise, in the event of a delay in payment, the Client owes the Contractor the applicable statutory interest for late payment.

The Client shall not pay any amount of any payment to any subcontractor or other employees of the Contractor from any amount owed to the Contractor, regardless of whether the performance of the Service or their delivery of the Services was confirmed by the Contractor. Such payment by the Client is possible only in the case of an explicit written order from the Contractor.

DAMAGES

The Contractor shall not be held liable for damages incurred to the Client if the Contractor was unable to foresee the occurrence of such damage in light of the given project task or any other definition of the contract from standard practice.

The Contractor shall not be held liable for damages related to the object of the Contractor's work, caused by persons who are in a legal business relationship with the Client as participants in the construction, which, in accordance with the construction legislation, are liable to third parties for direct damage arising from their works and their contractual obligations.
